Alice Ball Asks Damages, in Common Pleas Court Action, for Fall S. Ellsworth Ave.

LISBON, Jan. 13.—The City of Salem was made defendant in a $10,000 action filed in common pleas court here Friday by Alice Ball. The plaintiff alleges in her petition that, while enroute to church on S. Ellsworth ave., on Feb. 7, 1939, at 7:15 p. m. she stumbled and fell upon the side walk, fracturing her left arm, suffering abrasions on her nose, contusion of the scalp and body bruises for which she was compelled to spend much money for medical attention.

The petition charges the city permitted the sidewalk to become and remain in a dangerous condition, and at the point where the accident occurred was sunken four inches below the general surface of the walk.

MINE FAMILIES
ABANDON HOPE

Bodies of 30 Victims Are Found; Hunt Goes On For 62 Others

(By Associated Press)
BARTLEY, W. Va., Jan. 13.—Mine families, ever-conscious of the danger of losing their loved ones, displayed little hysteria while preparing today for burial of the 92 men given up for dead in the Bartley No. 1 mine gas explosion. Stolidly they made ready to claim the victims as rescue crews dug deeper into blast-torn corridors 600 feet underground, no longer seeking living men but the bodies of coal diggers apparently killed in their tracks.

62 Still Entombed
Thirty victims had been found, leaving 62 still in the debris-clogged "rooms" of the various mine entries two miles from the foot of the 620-foot perpendicular shaft.

None of the bodies had been brought to the surface and only three were identified. Rescuers planned to move them to the foot of the shaft for identification before starting them out today.

Finally breaking through to the center of the blast scene after 38 hours of tunnelling, workers yesterday found only battered bodies and abandoned hope for miners caught farther back in the workings.

Raymond E. Salvati, vice president of the Pond creek Pocahtontas Coal corporation who led rescue crews day and night, declared penetration was sufficient to eliminate any possibility the men had escaped explosion gas.

Believes All Are Dead
"They are all dead," he added. Weary rescuers, however, speeded up their digging toward the entombed but many long hours of toll remained ahead. Slate falls and "dead air" continued to retard progress. Officials said it might be Sunday or Monday before all bodies had been removed.

Congress Cautious
On Proposals For Helping Out Finns

Members Contend That President Should Initiate Specific Plan

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Congress seemed disposed today to approach Finnish aid proposals with as much, if not more, caution than is being displayed with respect to huge defense expenditures.

Fear of possible violation of American neutrality dominated the apparent reaction in both parties to President Roosevelt's suggestion that the law-makers work out legislation, in a spirit of non-partisanship, to give the little Baltic republic financial assistance.

Republicans contended it was the responsibility of the chief executive to initiate a specific plan.

Both house and senate were in recess today until Monday following house passage yesterday of the first appropriation bill of the session. This was a deficiency measure providing $264,611,252 for increases made during the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, in the army, navy, coast guard, anti-spy and neutrality patrol personnel. These increases were ordered by Mr. Roosevelt under an emergency proclamation issued after the war broke out in Europe last September.

PRE-TRIALS CUT
HEAVY DOCKET

Forty-Three Long Pending Common Pleas Cases Lopped Off

LISBON, Jan. 13.—Pre-trial hearings are proving a popular and speedy method of disposing of many long pending cases in common pleas court here, 43 such actions having been dismissed by Judge W. F. Lones out of an assignment of 49 scheduled by Assignment Commissioner James G. Stevenson for the week of January 8. The actions dismissed are in addition to many other entries made in court during the week.

The pre-trial hearing inaugurated two years ago have proved a very effective means of handling these cases which have been in the court for many months, and years in some instances, and are not assigned on the active trial list any more. The disposal of cases in this manner expedites court work, reducing the ever increasing number of cases on the bar docket.

Committee action on half a dozen pending bills to authorize loans and other support for Finland will wait reports on them from the state and treasury departments and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Bills so far introduced provide for a $60,000,000 loan, refunding the Finnish debt to this country, sale of the army's new Garand semi-automatic rifles to Finland at $1 each, and cancelling the remainder of the republic's post World-war obligation to the United States as of Dec. 1, with return of its Dec. 15 payment.

BRITISH SEND PANAMA NOTE

Reply To The Americas' Protest Of Violation Of Safety Zone Is Expected Soon

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Jan. 12.—British sources said today that a British note dealing with the protest of 21 American republics against violation of the Pan American neutrality "safety zone" would be forwarded in a few days to the president of the Pan American congress.

Contents of the proposed note were not disclosed, but most British sources indicated that the British consider the "safety zone" unenforceable.

Augusto S. Boyd, president of Panama, is also president of the congress.

On Dec. 23 the 21 Pan American nations, including the United States, protested to Britain, France and Germany against activities of their warcraft in the waters designated last October as a safety zone around the Americas.

The protest was delivered just 10 days after the daylong battle off the coast of Uruguay between three British cruisers and the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee.

FIND WRECKAGE OF NAVY PLANE

(By Associated Press)
SAN DIEGO, Calif., Jan. 13.—Two navy airplanes collided in mid-air over a southern California desert, and early today one of the wrecked ships was found with a flier's battered body inside.

The five other aviators in the collision were reported safe, but one official said only four had shown up and one was still missing.

Identified by the light of lanterns and flashlights, at the scene of the wreck, as the dead man was James Addison Crowson, 24, radioman first class.

Reach Wreckage
Deputy Sheriff Ernest Cox returned to El Centro, 70 miles east of here, to report that his party had reached the wreckage of one plane after sighting smoke, and had found the body in the charred ship.

It lay in a ravine near the top of a hill. The other plane apparently fell a mile or more away, Cox said. Cox insisted that nothing had yet been seen of Ensign Walter Glen Barnes, Jr., pilot, United States naval reserve, who earlier had been reported safe.

Ensign Harold Nathan Funk, 27, of Wray, Colo., pilot, who suffered a badly wrenched knee and severe body bruises, was in a hospital at El Centro. The other survivors released after first aid treatment, were:

Charles W. Post, 24, Troutdale, Ore., radioman second class; Elmer Edwin Jackson, 22, Hendersonville, N. C., radioman third class, and Paul E. Dickson, 23, aviation machinist's mate, second class.

Shifting Wind Blamed
The torpedo bombing planes, carrying three men each, were circling over barren Borego valley, 87 miles northeast of here, in regular formation—one above and just slightly behind the other—when shifting currents, the survivors said, brought them too close together.

The upper plane sheared off a wing of the lower, and both spun crazily.

"We were flying at about 10,000 feet when we collided," said Jackson, who was flying with Funk and Crowson.

"I saw Ensign Funk bail out in a parachute, and then I bailed out. The last I saw of Funk, he was floating away. One plane crashed on a hillside in flames."

All had to walk several miles to reach civilization. Funk and Dickson landed closely enough to find their way out together.

Two Injured As Machines Collide At East State and Park Ave.

Sheriff Harry L. Gosney was injured and Coroner Arnold Devon was shaken up when the county car in which they were riding failed to negotiate the turn at the corner of E. State st. and S. Lincoln ave., and the machine crashed into the front porch of the office-residence of Dr. L. F. Derfus, 117 S. Lincoln ave., at 7:30 p. m. Friday, according to the report of Patrolman Paul Ormsby.

The sheriff's car, witnesses said, rounded the corner with the siren screaming.

Thought It Was Fire Truck
Dr. Derfus, in his office, thought it was a fire truck but emerged a few seconds later to find the sheriff's car half-way into his front porch.

The impact splintered the wooden porch and demolished the brick steps.

The two county officials were taken inside, where Sheriff Gosney was given first-aid treatment. Patrolman Ormsby later reported to Police Chief Ralph Stoffer.

The sheriff, according to the officer's report, claimed he was in pursuit of an automobile and, as he turned onto S. Lincoln ave. after coming west on E. State st., was blinded by the lights of another car.

Richard Capel of 888 Washington ave., employed at the Lease drug store, on the corner, was attracted by the siren and from the sidewalk, where he stood, saw the car make a wide turn at the intersection and crash into the house.

He and Ralph Zimmerman reached the car about the same time and inquired if anyone was injured.

Reinforcements On Salla Front Indicate Battle Is Looming

(By Associated Press)
COPENHAGEN, Jan. 18.—Withdrawal of Soviet Russian troops from near Linahamari, the Arctic port of Finland's Petsamo district, was reported today in Stockholm dispatches, while Scandinavian correspondents said reinforcements of Finns and Russians on the Salla front indicated imminence of a major battle.

These dispatches said all except one Russian cruiser had left Linahamari, and that the Finns had cut the road to Salmijarvi, also in the Arctic area, thus complicating the Russian plan of supply.

In southeastern Finland, on the Karelian isthmus, the Russians were said to have set up loud-speakers advising the Finnish defenders to "surrender within 48 hours, or the Germans are coming."

In the Salla sector, one report from a Danish newspaper correspondent said the Red army had at least 40,000 men there and had been bringing up more in the past few days. He said the Finns also were reinforcing and preparing an attempt to encircle the invaders.

A Swedish correspondent said large numbers of fresh Russian troops were being dropped by parachute from planes.

Similar tactics were reported on the Karelian isthmus yesterday, but the Finns said their crack marksmen had picked off many of the invaders in midair and had overpowered the others as they touched the earth.

LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Most interesting comment ever made on Secretary Hull's trade pact is that everyone's for them who has no reason to be against them.

As an abstraction they can't be beaten. Reciprocity is the path of peace and prosperity, winding upward to a better world.

But to those walking on the path and doing the winding, reciprocity is as likely as not to be a mixture of stone bruises and blisters.

What college professors think about reciprocity, taking the long view, is less important politically than what practical dirt farmers think about it, taking the short view.

That is Secretary Hull's dilemma, which the President has chosen to make his dilemma too by adopting reciprocity as a cardinal policy of his administration.

The question isn't going to be discussed in terms of economics, in other words, but in terms of politics and votes, like budget balancing. As some sage once remarked about tariff, it's a national policy question, but a local political issue. Secretary Hull, who has begun his active defense of the trade pacts that have distinguished his term as secretary of state, is battling an old American custom.

CHALK UP A POINT

The right to engage in collective bargaining has been established by law in the United States. It has been established by law because it previously had been established by popular opinion.

Unfortunately, there has been confusion in public thought in some places about a companion right—the right not to bargain collectively, not to join a union. This confusion is being cleared up, slowly.

A point for clearer thinking on the subject was chalked up when employees of Endicott-Johnson Shoe Corp. voted almost five to one not to belong to any union. The poll was taken by National Labor Relations board.

Americans have the right to belong to any political party of their choosing, which is collective bargaining in the field of politics. This is a cherished privilege of life in this country.

But Americans also have the right not to belong to any established party, if they so choose. They can and do, on occasions, exercise their independence in this way—and no one would dare to deny them the privilege. When it becomes plainer than it is now that every affirmative right must be accompanied by a negative right to insure freedom of choice, a vast deal of needless and un-American bickering will disappear.

PASSING THOUGHT ITEM

It's doubtful if county and independent fair managers will get anywhere with a proposal for closing schools two days at fair time without being pelted by the Ohio school foundation program, but the kids are behind them to a boy.

Nothing stimulates interest in education like a holiday, particularly an unexpected one. Something was lost when public education outgrew the flexibility of the one-room school, where teacher could say—and sometimes did—"Let's have a holiday."

College graduates, to hear them tell it, never appreciated education more than on the occasions when some saintly professor failed to meet his class, or let it out early because it happened to suit his fancy. If every modern, streamlined school system had half a dozen extemporaneous holidays to bestow at will throughout the school year it would be a master stroke of public relations. Pupil morale would soar on the wings of expectancy like a bird.

PULLING TEETH

Don't look now, but baseball's creeping back on the sports page. Players are having their teeth pulled. This is the way each new season gets started—in a dentist's chair. The lads who didn't do so well the previous summer tell the doc they think it's that one "ay ack ere" where their finger's touching and the news is heard 'round the world.

There's nothing easier than pulling teeth to start a comeback and put the business office in a hole on its notion that a salary cut is in order. Dizzy Dean heard he was going to be cut from $20,000 to $10,000 and had two teeth out—zip! For another $5,000 he would go toothless.

But Dizzy's doc didn't play the game. He said it would be months before Ole Diz would know whether losing two teeth was going to make him worth what he thinks he's worth—and maybe it wouldn't make any difference at all.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, January 14

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a fairly auspicious one for all affairs of church and state that may be attained to progressive and even revolutionary ideals. Old conventionalities seem to be under disturbing vibrations, with the feminine element taking an active part in innovations. Strangers figure in the day's friendships and doings.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year in which strangers, new places and movements seem to hold determining place. Old and orthodox matters take a back seat in the progressive and revolutionary urges of the day. Elderly women and strangers hold conspicuous importance.

A child born on this day, while steady and easy-going, may have progressive ideas, with much originality and liberality of thought.

For Monday, January 15

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a most propitious one, with every prospect of attaining the goal of heart's desire, whether in business, cultural aims, social prestige or romance. There is a likelihood of great activity toward any cherished objective, also much festivity or gratification in connection with a social or sentimental celebration.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a progressive, happy and prosperous year, with every realm of human aspiration attaining high culminations of gratification and success. Romance, social, domestic or cultural activities may be paramount.

A child born on this day may be bounteously endowed with those talents and graces that fit it for a high and happy station in life.

A good many people are so constructed that they find it easier in politics, as in religion, to try something new rather than to make what they already have work.

To understand the uproar over the changes in England's cabinet, all a Hoosier has to do is visualize the firing of a basketball coach in the midst of a winning season.

Artemus Ward's theory of economy has apparently caught the fancy of President Roosevelt. Ward, in the spirit of thrift, resolved to live within his means if he had to borrow money to do it.

Perhaps, after all, the basic need of this nation and of the world is the gentling spirit of tolerance. What are we afraid of? Nobody has reason to fear or feel ashamed of the softening and humanizing influence of charity.

Physician Discusses Acne Which Attacks Young Folk

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ONE OF the torturing things about adolescence occurs to that unhappy minority which suffers from pimples or acne. While this may be a joke to other people, it is not only serious but tragic to the young victim.

It is no comfort to him to tell him that the condition will wear off, that when he gets to be 25 or 30 years old, he will look like everybody else. He realizes in his heart that it is his birthright to have a peaches and cream complexion and the sight of crops of ugly pimples engenders a feeling of deep resentment against the powers of the universe. It interferes with his appearance, his dignity and his loveliness, which are the principal preoccupations of the youth, male and female, from the age of 13 to 18.

Inasmuch as at this period of life all the endocrine glands are in a rather of activity, it is natural to conclude, theoretically, that there is a relationship between the skin infection and some disturbance of the glands.

Gland Extracts Used

On this basis treatment with thyroid extract and with pituitary extract has been extensively carried out. In some cases very striking and brilliant results have been obtained. There is, however, no way of telling exactly which case is going to respond. It may be put down as a truism that there certainly is no successful treatment which will apply to all cases of acne.

Attention to the diet is also a method of treatment which has been tried out very thoroughly. Patients are advised to abstain from sweets and fats. I have never seen the slightest result from such restrictions, and I think that it is time that it should be said quite definitely that it is cruel to impose these unnecessary restrictions on young people at the time when they must crave these articles of diet.

Certain dietary indulgences, however, do cause acute outbreaks of acne. The person who has it usually knows what these foods are; he finds them out by experience and very sensibly avoids them. There is no food, however, which applies to all cases.

greasy skins and that the infection invades the oil glands of the skin. It is in those crypts that the pustules occur. Treatment with strong soaps and frequent cleansings are a natural and sensible procedure.

Local treatment also includes the removal of the blackheads with a comedone extractor. A comedone extractor is a small celluloid instrument, on the end of which is a cuplike depression with a hole in the bottom. This is placed exactly over the blackhead and pressed down and the contents of the blackhead are expressed. The blackhead is simply a plugged up sebaceous or oil gland of the skin, and invites infection.

Drainage of the pus in the pimples that come to a head, the use of vaccines and the use of the x-ray—one of the qualities of which is to kill infection—are all established accessory methods of treatment.

LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Most penetrating comment ever made on Secretary Hull's trade pact is that everyone's for them who has no reason to be against them.

As an abstraction they can't be beaten. Reciprocity is the path of peace and prosperity, winding upward to a better world.

But to those walking on the path and doing the winding, reciprocity is as likely as not to be a mixture of stone bruises and blisters.

What college professors think about reciprocity, taking the long view, is less important politically than what practical dirt farmers think about it, taking the short view.

That is Secretary Hull's dilemma, which the President has chosen to make his dilemma too by adopting reciprocity as a cardinal policy of his administration.

The question isn't going to be discussed in terms of economics, in other words, but in terms of politics and votes, like budget balancing. As some sage once remarked about tariff, it's a national policy question, but a local political issue. Secretary Hull, who has begun his active defense of the trade pacts that have distinguished his term as secretary of state, is battling an old American custom.

CHALK UP A POINT

The right to engage in collective bargaining has been established by law in the United States. It has been established by law because it previously had been established by popular opinion.

Unfortunately, there has been confusion in public thought in some places about a companion right—the right not to bargain collectively, not to join a union. This confusion is being cleared up, slowly.

A point for clearer thinking on the subject was chalked up when employees of Endicott-Johnson Shoe Corp. voted almost five to one not to belong to any union. The poll was taken by National Labor Relations board.

Americans have the right to belong to any political party of their choosing, which is collective bargaining in the field of politics. This is a cherished privilege of life in this country.

But Americans also have the right not to belong to any established party, if they so choose. They can and do, on occasions, exercise their independence in this way—and no one would dare to deny them the privilege. When it becomes plainer than it is now that every affirmative right must be accompanied by a negative right to insure freedom of choice, a vast deal of needless and un-American bickering will disappear.

PASSING THOUGHT ITEM

It's doubtful if county and independent fair managers will get anywhere with a proposal for closing schools two days at fair time without being penalized by the Ohio school foundation program, but the kids are behind them to a boy.

Nothing stimulates interest in education like a holiday, particularly an unexpected one. Something was lost when public education outgrew the flexibility of the one-room school, where teacher could say—and sometimes did—"Let's have a holiday."

College graduates, to hear them tell it, never appreciated education more than on the occasions when some saintly professor failed to meet his class, or let it out early because it happened to suit his fancy. If every modern, streamlined school system had half a dozen extemporaneous holidays to bestow at will throughout the school year it would be a master stroke of public relations. Pupil morale would soar on the wings of expectancy like a bird.

PULLING TEETH

Don't look now, but baseball's creeping back on the sports page. Players are having their teeth pulled.

This is the way each new season gets started—in a dentist's chair. The lads who didn't do so well the previous summer tell the doc they think it's that one "ay ack ere" where their finger's touching and the news is heard 'round the world.

There's nothing easier than pulling teeth to start a comeback and put the business office in a hole on its notion that a salary cut is in order. Dizzy Dean heard he was going to be cut from $20,000 to $10,000 and had two teeth out—zip! For another $5,000 he would go toothless.

But Dizzy's doc didn't play the game. He said it would be months before Ole Diz would know whether losing two teeth was going to make him worth what he thinks he's worth—and maybe it wouldn't make any difference at all.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, January 14

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a fairly auspicious one for all affairs of church and state that may be attuned to progressive and even revolutionary ideals. Old conventionalities seem to be under disturbing vibrations, with the feminine element taking an active part in innovations. Strangers figure in the day's friendships and doings.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year in which strangers, new places and movements seem to hold determining place. Old and orthodox matters take a back seat in the progressive and revolutionary urges of the day. Elderly women and strangers hold conspicuous importance.

A child born on this day, while steady and easy-going, may have progressive ideas, with much originality and liberality of thought.

For Monday, January 15

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a most propitious one, with every prospect of attaining the goal of heart's desire, whether in business, cultural aims, social prestige or romance. There is a likelihood of great activity toward any cherished objective, also much festivity or gratification in connection with a social or sentimental celebration.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a progressive, happy and prosperous year, with every realm of human aspiration attaining high culminations of gratification and success. Romance, social, domestic or cultural activities may be paramount.

A child born on this day may be bounteously endowed with those talents and graces that fit it for a high and happy station in life.

A good many people are so constructed that they find it easier in politics, as in religion, to try something new rather than to make what they already have work.

To understand the uproar over the changes in England's cabinet, all a Hoosier has to do is visualize the firing of a basketball coach in the midst of a winning season.

Artemus Ward's theory of economy has apparently caught the fancy of President Roosevelt. Ward, in the spirit of thrift, resolved to live within his means if he had to borrow money to do it.

Perhaps, after all, the basic need of this nation and of the world is the gentling spirit of tolerance. What are we afraid of? Nobody has reason to fear or feel ashamed of the softening and humanizing influence of charity.

English Lutheran Church Celebrates Communion Sunday

Celebration of the Sacrament of Holy Communion and the order of public confession of sins will be held in the morning worship service at the Holy Trinity English Lutheran church tomorrow. Transfiguration Sunday.

Rev. George D. Keister, pastor, will preach on the subject "Looking unto Jesus." Complete services are as follows:

Sunday school, 9:45. (Matthew 18:21-35). Charles W. Youtz, supt.

The matter of forgiveness has a very important influence upon life everywhere. The relationships of people are greatly shaped by this principle. Revenge is the curse of mankind and peoples to secure vengeance breeds hate and retaliation. Forgiveness seems to be a long-lost custom. Personal life is made better by the assurance that God's forgiveness is real. We are sinners. The search for divine forgiveness is found in human hearts until it is found.

Morning worship, 11:00—Order of public confession of sins; celebration of the Sacrament of Holy Communion and sermon.

The problems and difficulties of any age or period are not insignificant. When the solution comes, the issue seems very small and inconsequential. Yet at the time, the way was blinded with problems. The first century Christians were ready to consult Christ on their troublesome perplexities. They looked to Him as a means and source of help and strength. The spirit of humanism has encouraged the reliance of man upon his own strength. This attitude is very well as far as it goes. There comes times in life when we must look to God for divine help.

Spiritual Values
These are days that should make men humble. So many proud plans and dreams have been shattered. So many high-sounding theories and philosophies have proved futile. Man's boasted culture and advancement have not led to greater contentment and happiness, but to confusion and disappointment. The fleeting and uncertain value of temporal things is being impressed upon us. God would have us give attention to the lasting value of true religion. We need God. We need the assurance of His abiding love and care. We need God. We need the consoling certainty of Christ's atoning work. We need the hope of a better and more stable life beyond this sorry confusion of our temporal existence.

We need the unshaken verities of God's revelation to man. You and yours are invited to hear them at every divine worship service. We teach and preach Christ crucified.

Baptist Pastor's Sermon Theme for Tomorrow Listed

"The Image of God in You" is the subject of the sermon which Rev. S. Talmage Magann, pastor, will deliver at the morning worship service of the First Baptist church tomorrow.

Among other things it will point to some elements of human life which reveal God and man's opportunity to develop a rich and beautiful personal relationship with Him.

English Lutheran Church Celebrates Communion Sunday

Celebration of the Sacrament of Holy Communion and the order of public confession of sins will be included in the morning worship service at the Holy Trinity English Lutheran church tomorrow. Transfiguration Sunday.

Rev. George D. Keister, pastor, will preach on the subject "Looking unto Jesus." Complete services are as follows:

Sunday school, 9:45. (Matthew 18:21-35). Charles W. Youtz, supt. The matter of forgiveness has a very important influence upon life everywhere. The relationships of people are greatly shaped by this principle. Revenge is the curse of much of life today. The desire of nations and peoples to secure vengeance breeds hate and retaliation. Forgiveness seems to be a long-lost custom. Personal life is made better by the assurance that God's forgiveness is real. We are sinners. The search for divine forgiveness goes on in human hearts until it is found.

Morning worship, 11:00—Order of public confession of sins; celebration of the Sacrament of the Holy Communion and sermon.

"The problems and not insignificant any age or period are the same. When the solution comes, the issue seems very small and inconsequential. Yet at the time, the first was hindered with problems. The first century Christians were ready to consult Christ on their troublesome perplexities. They looked to Him as a means and source of help and strength. The spirit of humanism has encouraged the reliance of man upon his own strength. This attitude is very well as far as it goes. There comes times in life when we must look to God for divine help.

May the habit of regularity in attendance at the services of the Lord become universal. May cold hearts be warmed into devotion and lagging spirits revived."

Cerman services at 11 a. m.

"These are days that should make men humble. So many proud plans and dreams have been shattered. So many high-sounding theories and philosophies have proved futile. Man's boasted culture and advancement have not led to greater contentment and happiness, but to confusion and disappointment. The fleeting and uncertain value of temporal things is being impressed upon us. God would have us give attention to the lasting value of true religion. We need God. We need the assurance of His abiding love and care. We need God. We need the consoling certainty of Christ's atoning work. We need the hope of a better and more stable life beyond this sorry confusion of our temporal existence. We need the unshaken verities of God's revelation to man. You and yours are invited to hear them at every divine worship service. We teach and preach Christ crucified."

'SERENO' GUARDS SPANISH HOMES

Glorified Night Watchman Holds Keys To All Houses

MADRID, Spain — Sereno—the fellow who has the key to your apartment building when you come in late at night—is recovering the prestige he enjoyed in the days of the monarchy.

Sereno is a glorified night watchman, generally a little man in a corduroy suit who carries a big bunch of keys that fit all the doors in your neighborhood. It is well to be on good terms with him.

It is an old Spanish custom to close up the house doors and windows tighter than drums after 10 o'clock at night. Spanish keys usually are much too large to be packing about. They wear holes in your pocket. So you depend on the sereno to let you in after 10 p. m.

The custom is to stand in front of the big iron gate that bars the entrance to your domicile and yell sing-song fashion, "Say-ray-no-o-o-o," all the time clapping your hands. If he is a good sereno and doesn't happen to be at the farthest end of his beat he will shout back, "Va," (meaning "I'm coming") and you know all is well.

Fumbling through a big cluster of keys by the light of a match, he often as not indulges in a wisecrack or two.

Once the sereno has opened the door he bids you good night and you tip him a few pennies.

Sees All

The sereno sees all, hears all, knows all. In Madrid there are some 2,000 serenos, or about one to every 500 persons. During the Civil war most serenos were believed sympathetic to the Nationalist cause. Those who were politically minded with active Republican sympathies were in a position to "put the finger" on rightists who were being hunted by leftists.

During the siege of Madrid the serenos did not have much to do. The capital was blocked out and there was no place to go at night. People who stayed out after curfew did so at their own risk, especially if they did not stand in well with the regime.

In the days before the republic the sereno also performed the functions of a town crier. His duty was to call out the time of day or night loud enough for all to hear. During the republic the custom was discarded.

Now it is being revived in provincial towns and villages. Making his rounds, the sereno calls out each half hour. He also describes the weather, whether it is clear, raining, snowing or threatening.

BRITISH, NAZI FLIERS BATTLE

Former Fight Off German Raiders Along Eng- ish East Coast

LONDON, Jan. 13.—British fliers fought off German aircraft on the east coast today while the air ministry announced that three German destroyers had been attacked on Thursday and reconnaissance flights were completed over Austria and Bohemia last night.

One German plane was shot down off the southeast coast of Scotland this morning. A press association said it was off the Firth of Forth. Shortly after noon, planes described as German were sighted over an east coast town. No guns were heard and no sirens sounded, but British fighters were reported also overhead.

Three planes which one observer said "positively" were German, from their black paint and the sound of their motors, flew over Norfolk about noon, bound inland. Shoppers rushed into the streets in time to see three British planes moving seaward at great speed. Watchers estimated the German craft were about 4,000 feet high.

The air ministry said the coastal command dropped bombs close to three German destroyers which it sighted Thursday. It denied that a British plane had been downed near Luxembourg yesterday, asserting it outran four Germans to reach its base safely.

"LOVE'S INTERLUDE" by -MAY- CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XXIX

His name was Kimberly Delatour. "Kim" to his friends. She thought that a delightful name. He belonged to the Harvard Club, the Racquet and the Union, in New York. He wanted to know how long she'd stay in Madison, and seemed visibly disappointed when she told him she was returning that same night. He was to be several days in Madison, and had hoped she'd give him the pleasure of taking her to dinner, the theatre.

"If you'll give me a rain-check on it—in New York?" she suggested, dimpling.

His expression, just for a moment, changed.

"Right. Where can I reach you?" "I'll give you my telephone number. I think I've a card somewhere." A little flustered, she rummaged in her bag.

She found the bit of pasteboard, scribbled the number under her printed name.

"I'm out and around a lot, but after six I'm usually in."

"Naturally you're in great demand. Half-a-dozen parties a day—a pretty girl has a wonderful time in the old burg—but I can be mighty persistent."

"If he but knew! But he doesn't, necessarily. At least, not in the beginning. And what harm to meet him a few times?"

They went back to the club car. On his chair, the two papers. She took one of them. They'd surely taken enough. She'd run her eye over today's news.

She was within an inch of reading a contradiction—a "to-be-married contradiction"—in the column of a gossip-writer—the same one who had printed the announcement about Ruth and Dr. Rodney Stone—the columnist was backing down now.

Had Moira read the airy half-apology for linking two together prematurely on only the lady's semi-say-so, the events of the next few weeks might have been quite different.

But the new acquaintance broke into her perusal of that column. So she went right on believing in the engagement of Ruth and Rodney.

It was with mixed feelings that Moira went home.

She was eager to see her father, to help him. But would he ask awkward questions about the source of the money needed for the interest on the mortgage? He was as proud as she was. More so. Of the old, scholarly school. She would have to fib again.

With a pang at the heart, as she got out of her taxi, she noticed the run-down air of the once lovely old house.

Up the bricked path where weeds thrust through the crevices. The front door needed painting. Above the bell push an "OUT OF ORDER—PLEASE KNOCK" notice, in a shaky hand.

They were as poor as that, her father and his maiden sister who kept house for him ever since her mother had died?

It was her father who opened the door. She thought, in the fleeting moment before she was gathered in his arms, "How gay he looks! And smaller! Surely he's shrunk!" And a pang went through her.

"Darling father! I came the moment I got your letter! I've good news for you!"

"My child! They kissed. There were tears in the eyes of each. 'Just to see you again—'"

"It's been a horribly long time!" "Let me look at you, Moira." He put thin fingers on her shoulders, thrusting her back, his dark eyes that were dimming peering through his glasses.

"You look lovely. Just like your mother, Moira. But you're too thin." "Says the pot to the kettle!" She managed to laugh gaily, though she was akin to weeping. "I'm bursting with health, darling. Grand spot, New York—if only you were with me!"

"But my work in the library—I couldn't get away."

"Of course I understand. You're quickly soothed. His research job in the library carried very little money—practically a pittance—but to his mind, anyway, its prestige was important.

"And I've my writing. I need quiet." He wrote treatises for scientific magazines. They paid disgracefully, she thought. (But never tell him that). Often, they paid nothing at all.

He drew her into the living-room. Even with the lights on it seemed thread-worn. That shabby-genteel air! She remembered its hand-someness, the gay parties often given in it, before the financial cataclysm hit the Carewe family in the year 1930.

Where were the Louis XVth chairs her mother had so prized? The petit-point prie-dieu and footstools? The fine old tapestry above the fireplace?

Sold? It had really come to that? Her thoughts flew.

Carlton—to the opulent man on the train coming up.

Money! Thank God for the check in her pocketbook! Away with silly scruples of pride—false pride!

They sat on the sofa with the broken springs, her hand held tight in her father's, his eyes devouring her, his lined face radiant.

"Now, you're not to worry another minute about the mortgage. I have it right here in my bag," she told him.

The recording angel would forgive the story she glibly poured out. She was "in the money" in dress design. True, she did work in a first-class beauty shop—he knew brother's... scholarly men trying to make a living... an ex-professor... they'd paid so little... yet their appetites were exacting... it really didn't pay to have roomers... but one couldn't let them starve....

Moira coaxed her into admitting to a sheaf of bills. Auntie tiptoed to a hidey-hole in the desk in her bedroom where she'd hidden them for fear of worrying her brother. He was worried enough already.

Coals for the old-fashioned furnace... thirty-seven dollars. The butcher... nineteen dollars. Almost twenty-seven for groceries. "And a disgraceful gas bill," said Auntie, almost weeping, "that runs up to thirty-five."

Moira asked gently: "Are these all?"

"All that I can remember. The worst ones, anyway." She added, with pathetic dignity: "I get my monthly check next week from my trust fund. Eighteen dollars, almost. Or, no, it's down to fifteen. But that'll help, won't it? And you can see our credit's good with the tradespeople."

Moira was figuring on paper with a pencil. One hundred and eighteen dollars for these bills. Six hundred and fifty to Terry. Her coat, extravagantly purchased (she regretted it now) with gloves, bag, shoes, totalling $90.35. There were also the round trip ticket from New York tonight's sleeping berth, incidentals.

Out of the fifteen hundred dollars of this month's allowance, a bare one hundred and thirty-six were left!

She did not hesitate. "Listen, darling, here's the cash for those immediate bills. You'll settle them tomorrow. And here's thirty-two more to carry on with, bringing the total I'm now giving you for the housekeeping to one hundred and fifty dollars. And I don't want to be repaid."

Auntie wept with relief. Kissed her. Thanked her brokenly.

Moira was realising, grimly, that this morning's nest-egg had shrunk to one hundred dollars for herself. (To be continued) what's worrying you." She was on the point of telling them about Kimberly Delatour. They might know of him. He hailed from Madison.

But two things held her back. They might know too much of him. Gossip. In her anxiety, Auntie might inquire of her cronies, might spoil things.

And whatever he was, or wasn't, the new Moira, the practical Moira who had sprung from the ashes of an old idealism, intended to see "Kim" again. Have fun.

Second, they'd disapprove of an unconventional meeting on a train. Be worried. Misunderstand.

A mighty gulf between the generations. Not even love could bridge it!

An early supper in the dining-room. Above her protestations, she helped Aunt Melissa get it. There was no maid.

In the kitchen, afterwards, her father smoking his one-pipe-of-the-day—for indeed he had high blood-pressure—she was distressed to learn that her excuse to Cora Deverney about his falling health was not wide of the mark. After all—she insisted on a straight-from-the-shoulder talk with Aunt Melissa.

The interest on the mortgage, she told her, was now arranged for. Were there any bills outstanding? Auntie seemed terribly embarrassed. She hemmed and hawed.

Her generation thought it dreadful to admit a shortage. They'd had roomers.... old friends of her brother's.... scholarly men trying to make a living.... an ex-professor.... they'd paid so little.... yet their appetites were exacting.... it really didn't pay to have roomers.... but one couldn't let them starve....

BUCKEYES, IOWA, CHICAGO RATED AS UNDERDOGS

All Figure to Be Beaten As They Resume Big 10 Play Tonight

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Ohio State, Iowa and Chicago resume Big Ten competition tonight still looking for their first victory in the conference basketball race.

Rated off their showing in previous games, all figure to get beat again tonight, but at least the Maroons and Buckeyes, last year's titlist stand better than an outside chance to upset the dopesters.

Here's a guess on how the five games shape up (with league ratings for each time in parentheses): Illinois (-1) at Ohio State (-2); figures to be the closest game of the night. Illinois should win by a close margin.

Indiana (-2) at Minnesota (-1); the veteran and speedy Hoosier quartet rates a definite edge and should come through.

Iowa (-2) at Michigan (-2); the Wolverines without too much trouble.

Wisconsin (-1) at Purdue (-2); the Boilermakers are our choice by approximately 12 points.

Chicago (-2) at Northwestern (-1); may boil down to a scoring duel between Dick Lounsburg and Dick Klein, elongated offensive stars of the Maroons and Wildcats. Northwestern is the pick by six points.

told. Then, the sheriff said to Zimmerman, "I had the green light; where's that other car?"

Witnesses said Coroner Deven shoved a revolver and camera in his pocket and in getting out of the car dropped numerous cartridges on the sidewalk which were picked up by bystanders. A crowd gathered at the scene quickly.

Sheriff Gostey called to the county jail for assistance and deputy sheriffs soon arrived, together with a tow truck. The county car was towed to a Libon garage and the sheriff departed in a taxi.

Here to Probe Lutz Death

The coroner and the sheriff came to Salem yesterday morning when Coroner Deven was called to investigate the death of Harry Lutz, killed by a train near the South Broadway crossing.

Police at approximately the same time last night, investigated an accident at the corner of E. State st. and Park ave., involving cars driven by Hugh McCready of 214 Park ave. and Calbert Thomas of R. D. Salem.

Hugh and Eugene McCready escaped unhurt but Thomas received a bump on his forehead and Miss Wilda Bricker, who was in Thomas' machine, received cuts about the face and knees.

Louis Goldberg of 484 N. Ellsworth ave. said a passing car side-swiped his machine, parked in front of his home, 7:15 p. m. Friday.

Frank Cook of R. D. 4, Salem, reported to police after his car ran into an automobile parked without lights on Jennings ave. at Fifth st. at 12:30 a. m. today.

A coal truck scratched the side of a car owned by U. D. Hancock of Alliance on E. State st. yesterday afternoon.

Theatre Attractions

Andrea Leeds and Don Ameche in a scene from "Swanee River", showing at the State Sunday through Tuesday.

Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds and Al Jolson have the featured roles in "Swanee River," the story of Stephen Foster, beloved American composer, which shows at the State theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Ameche has the title role in the picture, which also has Felix Bressart, Chick Chandler, Russell Hicks, George Reed and the famous Hal Johnson choir, Negro singers.

The life, romance and struggle for recognition of the Pittsburgh-born composer is beautifully produced on the screen in technicolor with some of his best-known works presented during the picture. The minstrel shows traveling the Mississippi on the picturesque showboats, which popularized many of the Foster melodies, have a part in the production.

The schedule for the rest of the week at the State is as follows:

Wednesday and Thursday—"We Are Not Alone," James Hilton's gripping story of an English country doctor whose fate is curiously bound to that of a little Viennese dancer. Jane Bryan, Raymond Severn and Flora Robson have the supporting roles with Paul Muni as the star.

Friday and Saturday—"Eternally Yours," romantic comedy of a master magician whose life was a little too exciting for his young wife. David Niven, Layetta Young, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Broderick Crawford, Zasu Pitts, Virginia Field and Raymond Walburn are featured.

Concluding tonight—"Destry Rides Again," featuring Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger and James Stewart.

The Grand's double bill Sunday includes "Espionage Agent," with Joel McCrea and Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn and George Bancroft, a story of the nation's unknown hero; and a comedy romance, "The Honey Moon's Over," featuring Stuart Erwin and Marjorie Weaver.

The Grand's list of pictures for the week also includes:

Wednesday only—"Pride of the Blue Grass," with Edith Fellows and Gantry, the blind horse whose feats have amazed experts; and "The Llano," based on an O. Henry short story, with Tito Guizar, Gale Sondergaard, Alan Mowbray and Jane Clayton.

Friday and Saturday—"South of the Border," with Gene Autry, Gene Storey, Smiley Burnette and Lupita Tovar.

Concluding tonight—"Chip of the Flying U," featuring Johnny Mack Brown.

Observers Predict That Hore-Belisha, Like Disraeli, Will Defeat His Foes

The career of Leslie Hore-Belisha, Britain's ousted War Minister, often has been compared to that of the great prime minister, Benjamin Disraeli, also Jewish, and observers wonder whether, like Disraeli, Hore-Belisha may not make defeat a stepping stone to greater triumphs. Hore-Belisha's strength lies in his popularity with the common people.

Born 43 years ago, he was a student at Heidelberg when the World War broke out. He emerged as a major. In 1923, he was elected to Commons as a Liberal. By 1932, after serving as Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, he became Financial Secretary to the Treasury. In 1934 he was made Minister of Transport and won fame and popularity for his traffic reforms.

In 1937 he was made War Minister. He was unfailingly friendly to the press and his good publicity is said to have piqued his colleagues. Belisha immediately started streamlining the army. Foreseeing the war, he urged peacetime conscription, and he decided to put younger men in charge of the military. Within two months he retired sixty senior officers. He outlived wealth and social position as qualifications for entrance to Sandhurst, Britain's West Point. He made the army more democratic, narrowing the gulf between officers and enlisted men. He improved living conditions and raised pay. When war came, he won the hearts of Britain's mothers by refusing to accept boys under 19 for service. His reforms gained the fervent loyalty of the enlisted men, but they antagonized the tradition-ridden brass hats.

Further friction resulted because Belisha frowned on the slaughter of soldiers which invariably followed precipitate action, preferring merely to hold Germany in check and blockade her into submission. He earned the antagonism of the powerful Cliveden set by advocating a high army rank for the Duke of Windsor. He made further enemies because he wanted to put Britain's air force in France under army control, a change made immediately after his ouster. And he is said to have had differences with First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill over the latter's ambition to head a Ministry of Defense in charge of all branches of the armed service.

Because of the many enemies he made, Hore-Belisha's ouster was perhaps inevitable. But, say many observers, the benefits which have resulted from his criticized policies, and his great popularity with the common soldier and the people at large, make his return to power just as inevitable. Disraeli came back. Hore-Belisha always emulates him.

ITALY SPEEDING RAILWAY CHANGE

Electrification of All Railroads Is Being Rushed

ROME—Italy is speeding electrification of her railways with water-generated power to prevent possible wartime paralysis of transportation facilities.

The administration of the state railways recognizes that should war come to Italy coal probably would be hard to get.

Furthermore, Italian officials point out, serious consequences to the nation's economy might ensue even should coal importations then be possible because of fluctuating prices in foreign markets.

Already Italian trains are running on a total of 3,187 miles of electrified line and nearly 3,000 more are planned.

Italian railway experts say electric traction has proven much cheaper than steam-powered trains and there is no worry about coal. They hold that electric trains are more durable than steam trains.

Italian officials say that when the electrification program is completed the saving in coal will amount to 2,500,000 tons a year. That would mean a saving of about 400,000,000 lire (20,000,000c), which Italy has been spending to buy foreign coal, mostly from Germany and England.

Italians say the saving in coal during the next two years will repay them the 600,000,000 lire ($30,000,000) they spent on electrification of railways in 1938-1939.

Rep. Dudley White Debates Running For Donahay Job

FREMONT, Jan. 13.—Rep. Dudley A. White (R., of Norwalk, today weighed requests that he become a candidate for the U. S. senate post now held by Democrat Vic Donahay.

Party leaders of his home district, the 12th, urged his candidacy at a meeting last night. White is serving his second term as congressman.

Kettering Lauds Small Industries

LOUDONVILLE, Jan. 13.—Unemployment would end if "every fifth town in the United States" had a thriving small industry, Charles W. Kettering, vice president of General Motors, contends.

He made that observation yesterday at the dedication of the Flexible company's new plant here.

Kettering, a native of Loudonville, is president of the concern, manufacturer of buses, ambulances and funeral cars.

told. Then, the sheriff said to Zimmerman, "I had the green light; where's that other car?"

Witnesses said Coroner Devon shoved a revolver and camera in his pocket and in getting out of the car dropped numerous cartridges on the sidewalk which were picked up by bystanders. A crowd gathered at the scene quickly.

Sheriff Gostey called to the county jail for assistance and deputy sheriffs soon arrived, together with a tow truck. The county car was towed to a Libon garage and the sheriff departed in a taxi.

Here to Probe Lutz Death

The coroner and the sheriff came to Salem yesterday morning when Coroner Devon was called to investigate the death of Harry Lutz, killed by a train near the South Broadway crossing.

Police, at approximately the same time last night, investigated an accident at the corner of E. State st. and Park ave., involving cars driven by Hugh McCready of 214 Park ave. and Dabert Thomas of R. D. Salem.

Hugh and Eugene McCready escaped unhurt but Thomas suffered a bump on his forehead and Miss Wilda Bricker, who was in Thomas' machine, received cuts about the face and knees.

Louis Goldberg of 484 N. Ellsworth ave. said a passing car side-swiped his machine, parked in front of his home, 7:15 p. m. Friday.

Frank Cook of R. D. 4, Salem, reported to police after his car ran into an automobile parked without lights on Jennings ave. at Fifth st. at 12:30 a. m. today.

A coal truck scratched the side of a car owned by U. D. Hancock of Alliance on E. State st. yesterday afternoon.

Theatre Attractions

Andrea Leeds and Don Ameche in a scene from "Swanee River", showing at the State Sunday through Tuesday.

Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds and Al Jolson have the featured roles in "Swanee River," the story of Stephen Foster, beloved American composer, which shows at the State theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Ameche has the title role in the picture, which also has Felix Bressart, Chick Chandler, Russell Hicks, George Reed and the famous Hall Johnson choir, Negro singers.

The life, romance and struggle for recognition of the Pittsburgh-born composer is beautifully produced on the screen in technique or with some of his best-known works presented during the picture. The minstrel shows traveling the Mississippi on the picturesque showboats, which popularized many of the Foster melodies, have a part in the production.

The schedule for the rest of the week at the State is as follows:

Wednesday and Thursday—"We Are Not Alone," James Hilton's gripping story of an English country doctor whose fate is curiously bound to that of a little Viennese dancer. Jane Bryan, Raymond Severn and Flora Robson have the supporting roles with Paul Muni as the star.

Friday and Saturday—"Eternally Yours," romantic comedy of a master magician whose life was a little too exciting for his young wife, David Niven, Loretta Young, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Broderick Crawford, Zasu Pitts, Virginia Field and Raymond Walburn are featured.

Concluding tonight—"Destry Rides Again," featuring Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger and James Stewart.

The Grand's double bill Sunday includes "Espionage Agent," with Joel McCrea and Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn and George Bancroft, a story of the nation's unknown hero; and a comedy romance, "The Honey Moon's Over," featuring Stuart Erwin and Marjorie Weaver.

The Grand's list of pictures for the week also includes:

Wednesday only—"Pride of the Blue Grass," with Edith Fellows and Gentry, the blind horse whose feats have amazed experts; and "The Liano Kid," based on an O. Henry short story, with Tito Gular, Gale Sondergaard, Alan Mowbray and Jane Clayton.

Friday and Saturday—"South of the Border," with Gene Autry, June Storey, Smiley Burnette and Lupita Tovar.

Concluding tonight—"Chip of the Flying U," featuring Johnny Mack Brown.

Observers Predict That Hore-Belisha, Like Disraeli, Will Defeat His Foes

The career of Leslie Hore-Belisha, Britain's ousted War Minister, often has been compared to that of the great prime minister, Benjamin Disraeli, also Jewish, and observers wonder whether, like Disraeli, Hore-Belisha may not make a stepping stone to greater triumphs. Hore-Belisha's strength lies in his popularity with the common people.

Born 43 years ago, he was a student at Heidelberg when the World War broke out. He emerged as a major. In 1923, he was elected to Commons as a Liberal. By 1932, after serving as Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, he became Financial Secretary to the Treasury. In 1934 he was made Minister of Transport and won fame and popularity for his traffic reforms.

In 1937 he was made War Minister. He was unfailingly friendly to the press and his good publicity is said to have piqued his colleagues. Belisha immediately started streamlining the army. Foreseeing the war, he urged peacetime conscription, and he decided to put younger men in charge of the military. Within two months he retired sixty senior officers. He outlived wealth and social position as qualifications for entrance to Sandhurst, Britain's West Point. He made the army more democratic, narrowing the gulf between officers and enlisted men. He improved living conditions and raised pay. When war came, he won the hearts of Britain's mothers by refusing to accept boys under 19 for service. His reforms gained the fervent loyalty of the enlisted men, but they antagonized the tradition-ridden brass hats.

Further friction resulted because Belisha frowned on the slaughter of soldiers which invariably followed precipitate action, preferring merely to hold Germany in check and blockade her into submission. He earned the antagonism of the powerful Cliveden set by advocating a high army rank for the Duke of Windsor. He made further enemies because he wanted to put Britain's air force in France under army control, a change made immediately after his ouster. And he is said to have had differences with First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill over the latter's ambition to head a Ministry of Defense in charge of all branches of the armed service.

Because of the many enemies he made, Hore-Belisha's ouster was perhaps inevitable. But, say many observers, the benefits which have resulted from his criticized policies, and his great popularity with the common soldier and the people at large, make his return to power just as inevitable. Disraeli came back. Hore-Belisha always emulates him.

ITALY SPEEDING RAILWAY CHANGE

Electrification of All Railroads Is Being Rushed

ROME—Italy is speeding electrification of her railways with water-generated power to prevent possible wartime paralysis of transportation facilities.

The administration of the state railways recognizes that should war come to Italy coal probably would be hard to get. Furthermore, Italian officials point out, serious consequences to the nation's economy might ensue even should coal importations then be possible because of fluctuating prices in foreign markets.

Already Italian trains are running on a total of 3,187 miles of electrified line and nearly 3,000 more are planned.

Italian railway experts say electric traction has proven much cheaper than steam-powered trains and there is no worry about coal. They hold that electric trains are more durable than steam trains.

Italian officials say that when the electrification program is completed the saving in coal will amount to 2,500,000 tons a year. That would mean a saving of about 400,000,000 lire (20,000,000), which Italy has been spending to buy foreign coal, mostly from Germany and England.

Italians say the saving in coal during the next two years will repay them the 600,000,000 lire ($30,000,000) they spent on electrification of railways in 1938-1939.
